1. SUMMARY

The UN Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination (CERD) considered six State reports in relation to its 97th Session (26 Nov to 14 Dec 2018). The Committee made no references to SOGIESC in any of the Lists of Themes or Concluding Observations adopted, though it inquired about LGBTI discrimination in the constructive dialogue with Honduras.

On the other hand, two State delegations (Albania, Norway) and three civil society organisations (Iraq, Norway, Republic of Korea) mentioned SOGIESC. Norwegian civil society (Queer World) also met with the Committee in person.

1.1. Concluding Observations

During its 97th Session, CERD reviewed the periodic reports of Albania, Honduras, Iraq, Norway, Qatar and the Republic of Korea. No SOGIESC recommendations were issued.

On one occasion only did the Committee refer to SOGIESC; in the constructive dialogue with Honduras, CERD asked about discriminatory hiring practices against LGBTI indigenous and Afro-Honduran persons. Meanwhile, in the constructive dialogues of Albania and Norway, the State delegations mentioned SOGIESC legislation, action plans, hate crimes and police trainings.

Three States also had civil society submissions referencing SOGIESC, although none were stand-alone submissions. In the case of Iraq, data by IraQueer on murders of and violence against homosexuals was used to advocate for urgent protection of LGBTI persons. The report for the Republic of Korea documented the strong opposition to anti-discrimination laws and human rights ordinances based on homo- and Islamophobic campaign slogans.

The submission for Norway contained several sub-sections on issues affecting LGBTI migrants, including the lack of right to report hate crimes if paperless, to family reunification for same-sex couples, and to medical care for trans persons without a permanent residence. Additionally, the Secretary General of Queer World met with CERD to raise these issues in person, but they did not form part of the Committee’s recommendations.
